WHO'S AFRAID OF WALLACE STEVENS?

THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 7PM

Poet Wallace Stevens, who lived in Hartford for nearly 40 years, is among the half-dozen greatest American poets. However, compared with Robert Frost, Emily Dickinson or Walt Whitman, he is more admired, from a distance, than read. In this 90-minute discussion, David Rosen will confront the poet's perceived difficulty head-on, reading through a few poems from his late period, when he arguably wrote his best and thorniest work.
